What Is Health Coaching?
Health coaching is a relatively new behavioral health intervention that helps patients set and achieve health-promoting goals. It empowers patients to:

- Change lifestyle-related behaviors and reduce health risks
- Improve their ability to self-manage chronic conditions
- Increase their health-related quality of life and well-being

Health coaching has been shown to be effective at improving overall health and productivity, addressing multiple behaviors, promoting increased physical activity and better nutritional habits, encouraging medication adherence, and improving self-management skills for chronic conditions. These outcomes have demonstrated that worksite health-management programs that offer personal counseling for high-risk employees are more likely to result in reduced risks and improved health.

As a result of the beneficial impact on health-related outcomes, health coaching has gained popularity and is increasingly viewed as a valuable method of promoting healthy behavioral change.
